HIGH POINT FATHERS WILL PROTECT MORAL

Whizz Bang, Wampus Cat and Ho
Dog Barred From Sale in Furniture Town.

High Point, Feb. 23.—A city ordinance became effective today making it unlawful to sell, distribute or give away copies of certain publications deemed by the mayor and council to be obscene. The ordinance, adopted by a unanimous vote of council last night, specifies the Whizz Bang, the Wampus Cat and the Hot Dog. A fine of $25 is imposed for each violation.

A committee from the Rotary club appeared before council and requested that the publications be banned from the city. They are largely responsible for the delinquency found among children of school age, the committee said.

The committee had interviewed the school teachers of the city and were surprised that the publication of such a large circulation among young girls. One teacher reported over 20 copies in her room at one time.

The magazines are shipped by express, and the inference was drawn that the publishers use this service in order to avoid the law against sending obscene matter through the mails.

From good authority we understand the books spoken of in the above article, are being sold in Cheraw and are being read by our school boys and girls. We saw a copy of the "Whizz Bang" today and can testify it is not proper reading for anyone. Some parts of it are positively indecent, though always by the inference you draw from what is written. On the title page is the statement that the book is entered at a U. S. Post Office as second class matter. If this is true we can't see why the publishers are not handled by the government for sending indecent publications through the mail. Surely if an indecent meaning is plainly intended, the wording is immaterial. Our Council (if it is within their jurisdiction), who have the well being of our young people at heart will surely prohibit the sale of the books in town.

Couldn't Spare Him.

Janet's mother entered the nursery and, as she surveyed the child's collection of dolls, said:

"Now, dear, you have had this soldier doll a long time and the poor little girl next door is ill and has no doll at all. Don't you want to send her your soldier boy?"

"No, mother," said Janet, "I would rather send her any one but that. You see, that's the only man we have in the family, and he's married to all the other dolls."

Our Plan.

The young married couple had just returned from a honeymoon and the wife went to her next door neighbor. "Of course I'm horribly green," she confessed, "and I want to learn. So you'll help me won't you, please? First, I want to know how to manage our finances. Do you budget yours?"

"Not yet," the older woman smiled. "We're not that far yet. We still belong to the 'stretch it' rank of families."

Garden Seed

Now is the time to get your garden seed. Have you ever planted the Brimmer Tomato, it is the best. Or order also some new Sweet Corn, De-Lue's Golden Giant. We are the only ones in South Carolina who handle it.

BLIND TO GREAT INVENTION

French Emperor Missed Opportunity When He "Turned Down" Ericsson's Offer to Build Monitors.

March 8, 1862; August, 1921. These dates comprise the history of ironclad monitors, the first of which, invented by John Ericsson, met and defeated the Merrimac at Hampton Roads on the date first named. The last of the British monitors, after seeing minor service in the World war, was consigned to the scrap heap by the admiralty last August.

The history of the monitors goes back to the days of Napoleon III, when Great Britain was in a ferment, apprehending invasion from across the channel. Ericsson, a Swedish engineer, urged the French emperor in 1854 to build, according to his design, armored vessels of low freeboard, with big guns in revolving shot-proof cupolas, placed centrally on the decks. Such a type of armor-clad ship, he declared, would revolutionize naval warfare. The idea was not carried out, and Great Britain's wooden ships never had to face the ordeal of the Merrimac.

But Ericsson prevailed on the Union leaders of the American Civil war to give his idea a trial. In 100 days his ship was built, armed and equipped, and it soon fulfilled the inventor's hope that it would serve as a "monitor," or lesson, to the Confederacy.

Even before this, however, the British admiralty had taken up the idea and had built a vessel of a similar type. At the time of the armistice the British navy had 37 of them.

LAST FATALITY IN DISPUTE

When Determined, Monument Will Be Erected on Spot Where Unfortunate Soldier Died.

When was the last man killed in the war? This is the latest question asked by the French literary journal, Renaissance. It promises to be taken up seriously by the allied nations, each of which has hitherto considered that the honor belonged to it. The British declare that a few minutes before eleven o'clock on the morning of the armistice a colonel of machine gunners in the British army received a stray bullet, but it is doubtful whether this bullet came from a German sniper or from a party of moppers up. At any rate, the British case is considered outclassed. Veterans' associations in allied countries are being asked to send in corroborated details of incidents likely to aid in solving the problem, which the Renaissance assures its readers is just as important as is the identity of the first man killed in the war, the latter honor, of course, belonging to the French soldier who crossed the German frontier without knowing war had been declared and was shot during an altercation with a German customs agent and a squad of German infantry. Once the identity of the last man killed in the war is established, a monument will be raised to commemorate the fatality and the soldier who lost his life at the moment of victory.

Sapphire With a History.

The big sapphire on the top of the cross on the state crown of the king of England once was believed to have the power of curing rheumatism, sciatica and various other diseases which afflicted men a thousand or so years ago. It is not believed that this stone has lost any of the powers with which it began life, perhaps a million years ago, but a large part of the British public seems to have lost faith in its curative properties. This sapphire was once the setting of the coronation ring of Edward the Confessor, who was buried in Westminster abbey, and was taken out of his casket in the year 1101, since which time it has been one of the English crown jewels. To whom it belonged before it became the property of the pious Edward historians do not tell.—Washington Star.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND NEVER SUSPECT IT Tests for Insurance Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success. An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

Tired

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"... I began using Cardui," continues Mrs. Burnett. "After my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, feel just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you. At all druggists.
